- CIVICUS: Too Much International Giving Goes to Wrong CSOs

Restrictive rules mean too much aid money is wasted on fundermediaries, rather than going to organisations on the ground who can spend it best, according to Civicus, an organization which exists to strengthen civil society around the world. While many civil society organisations are “good at playing the game”, the most innovative and ambitious initiatives rarely involve project proposals, CIVICUS director has stated. Sriskandarajah said a problem for civil society organisations came from measures making it difficult to access foreign funding. This is made a greater problem by the fact that “domestic funders are not yet able or willing to support change-seeking activities”. “The situation is most acute in countries that have apparently “graduated” into middle-income status and have therefore fallen off donors’ priority lists”. He also reminds that it is on civil society to “change some of its behaviours” - from weaning itself off grant funding, to exploring new ways of raising money and designing activities that don't rely on financial support. - AidEx – A Gathering of Emergency and Development Actors to Take Place in Brussels

From global aid organisations to international CSOs, from private sector decision-makers to inventors of innovative new products AidEx has become a vital fixture in the calendars of many aid and development professionals. AidEx has been established as the leading platform for the international aid and development community to come together and improve the efficiency of aid. It is a 2 day event, which encompasses a conference, exhibition, meeting areas, awards and workshops. Its fundamental aim is to engage the sector at every level and provide a forum for the visitors to meet, source, supply and learn. It was created to help the international aid and development community engage the private sector in a neutral setting, drive innovation and support the ever-growing need for emergency aid and development programmes. It is a unique, world-renowned event that works hard to genuinely improve the situation on the ground. Collaboration has been announced as the theme for 2015. AidEx Brussels is free to attend, click here if you would like to register your place. More information is available here.

- Tunisian Civil Society Groups Win the Nobel Peace Prize 2015

The Tunisian National Dialogue Quartet - a democracy group - has been awarded the 2015 Nobel Peace Prize for "its decisive contribution to the building of a pluralistic democracy," the Norwegian Nobel Committee has announced. The group of four organisations established "an alternative, peaceful political process at a time when the country was on the brink of civil war," the Committee said, referring to the period following Tunisia's 2011 revolution. The National Dialogue Quartet is made up of four key organisations in Tunisian civil society: the Tunisian General Labour Union (UGTT); the Tunisian Confederation of Industry, Trade and Handicrafts (UTICA); the Tunisian Human Rights League (LTDH); and the Tunisian Order of Lawyers. Civil society across Europe have welcomed this award also as a recognition of the importance of meaningful civil and social dialogue for building and strengthening pluralistic democratic societies. - The EU Progress Reports with New Methodology to Be Published on 21st October

The first Enlargement package under the Juncker's Commission will be published on 21st October, 2015. The Enlargement strategy and the Progress Reports, whose publication was postponed due to the scheduled European Council focus on migration the week before, will have some novelties including a mid-term strategy for the first time. BCSDN has been analyzing the Package from the perspective of civil society development findings and recommendations to Governments in these documents since 2009. It is to be seen how the new methodology will be reflected on assessments on state of civil society as last year's reports featured for the first time civil society as separate section within the Political criteria of the Progress Reports for each country. This year we hope to see EC has further advanced in the way it monitors civil society development and uses its own monitoring tool – The Guidelines for EU support to civil society development in enlargement countries, 2014-2020. Stay tuned for this year's BCSDN analysis which will be set in the framework of the Monitoring Matrix on Enabling Environment for CSDDev. The new progress report will be made available here.

- Measuring Corporate Investments in Socially Responsible Activities in Serbia

The Forum for Corporate Responsibility has been implementing a survey looking into corporate social responsibility since 2012. The survey on sustainability and responsible investments is an ever increasing practice among responsible companies. Through open communication and informing the interested public on their economic, environmental and social impacts, the companies have the opportunity to initiate a wider social dialog and include and gather partners from various sectors of civil society around common issues. The Survey shows the status of corporate philanthropy and corporate social responsibility in the country, trends in this area and compares the situation with previous years. The survey for 2014 was completed by 15 leaders in corporate social responsibility, with the USAID support. The Forum for Corporate Responsibility is a network of leading companies contributing to the development of the community, by stimulating the development of corporate social responsibility and establishing permanent and stable socially responsible practices in the business sector. - Full Transparency Vital for Trust – Charity Executive Pay Report

The National Council for Voluntary Organisations (NCVO) set up this inquiry to: explore the arguments about what are appropriate levels of pay for charity senior executives and how these levels should be arrived at; explore the relationship between salary levels and public trust and confidence in the sector as a whole; produce definitive guidelines for charity trustees, informed by a broad debate on the issues involved, to take into account when setting salaries. The main recommendation coming from the report is that charities have been told they should publish full details of the pay of their senior executives, in order to maintain public trust.
