- Analysis: EU Funds for Supporting Civil Society Development in the Western Balkans 2007-2013

The EU has been supporting civil society and the enabling environment in which civil society in Enlargement countries operates through the IPA Civil Society Facility Instrument that was established in 2008. Since then, BCSDN has been following this issue, and in beginning of 2013 published its first analysis - the Infographic on IPA CSF 2007-2011. As IPA I is closing down and in the frame of the planning of the EU assistance for the forthcoming period, BCSDN has updated and broadened the analysis to assess how the EU has supported the civil society in Western Balkans for the entire 2007-2013 period. How much funds has EU devoted to the development of CS in the WB for the 2007-2013 period? How were these funds used? And how much is the EU funding in comparison to the funding provided by the states? BCSDN has prepared a 4 page policy brief (in English and Macedonian language) answering these questions, which you can read here.

The Office for Cooperation with Civil Society of the Government of the Republic of Serbia published a second draft of the National Strategy for enabling environment for civil society development for the period 2015 – 2019, which is available to the interested public and professional community on the website

<http://strategija.civilnodrustvo.gov>. The second draft is a result of ten consultative meetings held in ten cities in the country during October and November 2014, and based on suggestions collected until 1st of December through electronic form. Additionally, the monitoring of the progress of the (future) strategy implementation will be centred on baseline studies which are now in preparation and which will comprise information on the enabling environment for civil society obtained from relevant authorities. The Office invites the interested public to send comments and suggestions by 15th April, 2015, and thus contribute to the creation of this important strategic document. - Incomplete Chain - Policy Brief on Minimum Standards for Public Consultation in Kosovo

The Kosovar Civil Society Foundation (KCSF) during the previous year has been working on defining the minimum standards for the public consultation process at government level. Apart from reviewing the international principles and practices in the field of civil society participation in decision-making, KCSF has also consulted numerous representatives from the civil society and public institutions. This process has resulted in a policy brief on Minimum Standards for public consultation process, a document which contains an analysis of the current legal framework and its level of implementation, main challenges of public consultation process and a detailed list of standards and sub standards that would have to be implemented by all government level institutions. More information is available here.

- MCIC: Report on the Implementation of the Strategy for Cooperation between the Government and Civil Society in Macedonia (Jun 2012 - Dec 2014)

In June 2012 the Government of the Republic of Macedonia adopted a new strategy for Cooperation with civil society for the period 2012 - 2017, with the financial support of the EU, prompting a need for continuous and regular monitoring of the Strategy implementation. MCIC has prepared a public policy document that covers the implementation period from June 2012 to December 2014. Almost half (48%) of the measures envisaged in the strategy do not show any progress. In order to achieve efficiency in the implementation of the Strategy, which so far has seen varying degrees of implementation per measure, and especially low levels of realization of the key measures for development and sustainability of civil society, the key institutions involved in the Strategy implementation need to take into account the recommendations of the reports and to make additional efforts to implement them. The publication is available for download here.

- Special Rapporteurs Kiai and Heyns Join Forces to Draft Recommendations on Managing Protests

Special Rapporteurs Maina Kiai and Christof Heyns have embarked on a new joint project aimed at compiling a set of practical recommendations for the proper management of assemblies worldwide. Public assemblies are a central feature of the modern world but often boil over and lead to bloodshed. Societies are often not sure how best to deal with such protests and the United Nations Human Rights Council (HRC) wants to provide guidance in this regard. The project – which was mandated by HRC Resolution 25/38 in 2014 – will run throughout 2015, with the final report being presented to the HRC at its 31st session in March 2016. The recommendations will be drafted jointly by Kiai, the Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association, and Heyns, who serves as the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions. - Media Freedom and Integrity in the Western Balkans: Recent Developments

Media freedom has declined sharply in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Macedonia and Serbia over the past several months. Direct and indirect interference by the authorities in everyday coverage is commonplace. Values of media freedom and freedom of expression will remain meaningless unless properly enacted in domestic law and enforced fairly and impartially. Hence, there is a pressing need for better laws and regulation to shield reporters and editors from undue influence. Responsibility falls squarely on the governments of the Western Balkans and on those - primarily the European Union - that provide assistance. At the same time, governments, the EU and foreign donors must think of ways to go beyond a legal-institutional approach to freedom of media and to develop innovative ways to support independent media. The publication is available for download here.

- Civil Society and Government: Participatory Policy Formulation in Serbia

Up to this point, the issue of a systemic approach to civil society participation in the process of policy making in Serbia has not been resolved. In its last Progress Report, the EC notes that "civil society is a crucial component of any democratic system and should be recognized and treated as such by the state institutions". Notably, the EU has leverage to emphasize civil society participation mainly in relation to the accession process. Beyond this sphere, the resources and expertise of the civil society should be recognized and taken advantage of by the government and other public institutions. This is supported by the increasing complexity of the course of reforms, the challenge of legislative harmonization, and the lack of human capacity in the public administration as part of the EU integration process. In this regard, substantial effort needs to be invested to assure an evidence basis from the beginning of the planning of a policy, which is the basis of a sound and comprehensive reform. The publication is available for download here.

- MAXCAP Working Papers No. 5 & 6 Published

Two new working papers have been published within the MAXCAP project this month. The Working Paper No. 5 "The Effects of the Eastern Enlargement on the Decision-Making Capacity of the European Union" by D. Toshkov argues that enlargement has had a rather limited impact on legislative production and duration, and that it is extremely hard to disentangle this impact from other contemporaneous institutional and socioeconomic developments. The Working Paper No. 6 "Contextual Policy Reading of Public Opinion Data and Recent Trends in Attitudes towards European Integration" by G. Dimitrov, K. Haralampiev and S. P. Stoychev argues that pro/contra EU enlargement attitudes are a construct of diverse, multifaceted relationships; citizens' attitudes are clearly polarized in most countries and there is a steady, increasing trend for negative attitudes to prevail; and that the structural causes for these polarizations are, most significantly, nationally specific and go down to 13 levels of factor influences. The papers are available for download here.

- Aid to Civil Society: A Movement Mindset

Supporting local agents of nonviolent change is critical to preventing violent conflict and advancing democratic development. Civic campaigns are key drivers of social and political development, as is clear from issues-focused movements in Central and Eastern Europe, Latin America, and most recently the Middle East and North Africa. Effectively aiding civic movements that are fluid, diverse, decentralized, and often loosely organized is tricky. Drawn from a review of the literature and numerous interviews with international policymakers and civil society leaders, this report explores both the ways donors engage civil society and creative new approaches to supporting non-traditional actors. The publication is available for download here.

- 2015 BNP Paribas Individual Philanthropy Index

Philanthropy is expanding worldwide, on average increasing by 5 points in 2015, as the 2015 BNP Paribas Individual Philanthropy Index by Forbes Insights reveals. This index shows a growing philanthropic interest in Europe, which is nearing a tie position with the US due to the increase of current donations and pledges. According to the report, the primary cause of mobilisation for philanthropists is health and their first motivation is the sense of duty. The growing needs and the multitude of charitable organisations make the choice difficult for philanthropists and family/relatives advices remain the key drivers for philanthropic decisions. This “BNP Paribas Individual Philanthropy Index” measures and reflects the commitment of philanthropists in four regions – Europe, Asia, the Middle East and the United States through a survey of some 400 high net worth individuals. The report is available for download here.
